Scatter for Summer.

Though vacation is but three days old, scores of school people have already already enrolled among the students of summer university and college courses, both in this country and Europe. Some both in this country and Europe. Some are undertaking the professional and special work of teachers' colleges con-nected with famous universities; some are studying languages, music, and art in schools, conservatories, and studios where the highest degrees for excellence

The Virginia mountains are always beauti-ful and healthful, and will claim their full quota of patrons this year, while fishing trips and camping parties lure those who love a simple life in the open, away from hotels and boardwalks and formal social functions.

Many Stay at Home

The "stay-at-homes," those who find Washington an attractive summer resort, increase in number every year, for these are the days of suburban homes, of breezy front and back plazzas, and roomy sleeping porches. Scores of teachers stay at home and let rest and recre ation soak into their tired bodies and minds for a month or more, seeking change of scene only toward the close of the vacation period. Happy is the man woman who has a little garden spot anywhere near the city; nothing tempts him to take a regulation "vacation trip." but in the fall he will tell with swelling pride how he raised vegetables enough all summer for the entire family.

The higher the position the greater the esponsibility, and Dr. William M. CENSUS FIGURES SHOW DECREASE IN ILLITERACY

Result of Great Immigration of Decade Strikingly Brought Out by Report.

STATISTICS FOR DISTRICT SHOW RESIDENTS' PARENTAGE

Foreign-born Population Shows Big Increase-Males of Voting Age Number 26,999,151.

The result of the great increase of imnigration to the United States in the ast ten years is strikingly illustrated by by the Census Bureau, giving the parentage, nativity, and color of the population in various cities in the United States, together with estimates on the illiteracy conditions.

The District, with a total population o $31,069 in 1910, had a foreign born white population of 24,351. There were 166,711 persons of native parentage in the Dis-trict and 45,065 of foreign or mixed par-The colored population was 94,466, while there were 495 persons of other races, Indians and Asiatics.

New York Shows Increase. While the total population of New York us increased at the rate of 24.5 per cent in the last ten years, the native born population, including both those of native parentage and of foreign and mixed parentage has increased at the rate of only 16 per cent. On the other hand, foreign-born white in New York State have reased at the rate of 4 per cent. increased at the rate of 50 per cent.

This applies even more strongly to New York City, where foreign-born whites are shown by the statistics just issued to constitute nearly 40 per cent of the en-

Hilteracy on Decrease.

Despite the heavy immigration to this country in the last ten years, the propor-tion of illiterates for continental Upited States was less in 1910 than in 1900 in all of the nine geographic divisions, and in all States except New York and Connecticut. In these States, in which the proportion of illiterates was about the same, the actual number of illiterates was much larger because of the heavy influx of foreign-born whites. Owing to the same cause, the number of illiterates has in-creased in many other states, though the proportion with regard to the entire population in each State has diminished maerially. More than 15,000,000 persons in the United States will register their choice for President in the campaign of the present year, according to estimates based on figures for previous Presidential elections in conjunction with population statistics based on the census of 1919.

The total number of votes cast in 1908 was 14,87,000; in 1900, 12,965,000; in 1892, 12,-944,000, and in 1888, 11,381,000. Dividing the vote thus officially recorded into the pop-ulation named by official counts or estimates for the years in question shows the average population for each vote cast as follows: In 1908, 5.98 persons for each vote cast; in 1964, 6.1; in 1966, 5.4; in 1886, 5.1; in 1882, 5.4; in 1888, 5.27.

The Census Bureau's statistician, Will-iam C. Hunt, recently issued a statement showing the potential voting strength of the United States as expressed by the number of its males twenty-one years and over, exclusive of foreign-born whites who have not been naturalized. In 1916 the number of males of voting age in the United States, exclusive of foreignborn whites, who had not been naturalized, was 35,999,151, or 29.4 per cent of the total population, as compared with 21,-134,299, or 25.8 per cent of the total population. These figures do not, of course represent the actual number of voters in the several States and Territories, but rather, the number of males who, from the standpoint of sage and nativity, are eligible to vote, aside from any qualifications based upon coucation, length of residence, or considerations of a like nature imposed by the national or State govern-

Of the foreign-born white males of voting age. 45.7 are naturalized, 2.6 per have taken out first papers, 24.1 alien, and 11.7 per cent are unknown. TYPHOID, Etc.

Many epidemics of typhoid have been traced o naw milk. (Kober.)

In the typhoid epidemic of Cassel in 1909 (over 300 cases within 10 days), only those who drank raw milk contracted the disease. (Helpomaum.)

In hospitals where a change was made from new to properly parteurized milk typhold con-ditions immediately improved and the mos-tality rate decreased. (Kdmill.)

It has been found that among patrons of dairies supplying properly pasteurized milk and cream there occur but very few cases of typhoid. (Rosenau.)

Discase germs rise with or cling to the cream, which contains at least tweire times as many bacteria per volume as the whole milk from which it was separated. (Schrog-der.)

Milk trusts and others here spread the re-ports that posteurizing was harmful. Able auritarians have often disproved this, Chil-dren said persons in a rundown coedition should not drick raw milk and cream; it is
